SAYS SHE LIKES BRIDGE BUILDING

Mrs. Catherine Nelson, the Only Woman Electrical Welder in the World, Now Working for the First Time on Bridge Work—Never Had an Accident.

Mrs. Catherine Nelson of Jersey City, the only woman welder on outside work in the world, is busy at work welding the bands that hold together the two main cables that support the Rondout creek bridge, and is making rapid progress. Just how much longer she will remain on the job depends on the number of bands that it will be found necessary to weld. Mrs. Nelson is a pretty blonde weighing 180 pounds and standing 5 feet 6 inches in height. She was born in Denmark on March 22, 1888, the year of the blizzard that is still spoken of by the older residents of Kingston.

Left a widow while still a young woman she cast about her to find some means of earning a livelihood. There was not enough money in the ordinary lines of female work to support herself and two children, a boy and a girl, and she had a liking for machinery she decided to become a machinist and it was while employed in a shop where there was a department for electric welding that she became interested and decided to learn to become a welder. How well she succeeded is shown by the fact that when the Weehawken Welding Company were requested to send a skilled welder to Kingston for the bridge work she was sent.

While she has followed that profession for seven years she has never met with an accident or refused to work on a job because of its hardship or danger. Mrs. Nelson has worked on all sorts of jobs where electrical welding was required, and working at great heights does not bother her in the least. In Bayonne she did electrical welding on a water tower at a height of 225 feet above the ground. On the present job she works at times at a height of over 200 feet above the Rondout creek.

Asked today how she liked her work she replied that she enjoyed it not only because of the shorter hours but also because of the fact that she commanded the same pay as any skilled male mechanic. "A woman in the home," said Mrs. Nelson with a smile "has to put in much longer hours and works much harder than I do, and she does not command the wages that I receive for my work."

Mrs. Nelson is planning to spend Christmas this year with her two children in Denmark.

"This is the first time that I ever did any bridge work," said Mrs. Nelson, "and I like it, and will hate to leave after I have completed the job. There is something fascinating about bridge work when you work high up in the air."

Mrs. Nelson when she completes the welding job on the bridge will not be idle, however, for there is another job awaiting her in New Jersey near the city of Trenton.

Mrs. Nelson while at work on the bridge here receives $30 a day wages.

HOW VOTERS ARE DISTRIBUTED

As on Primary Day, Tuesday, September 13, there will be a contest for the nomination on the Republican ticket for mayor between Palmer Canfield, Jr., and Walter P. Crane, the latter having been designated at the unofficial Republican city convention, and the former filing a petition for designation. There is much interest among the voters of this city on the outcome. Only voters who are enrolled as Republicans can vote on Primary Day in the mayoralty contest, and there are 5,398 of them in the thirteen wards, as follows:

First Ward, District One	506
Second Ward, District One	479
Second Ward, District Two	405
Third Ward, District One	221
Third Ward, District Two	151
Fourth Ward, District One	163
Fourth Ward, District Two	142
Fifth Ward, District One	367
Sixth Ward, District One	83
Sixth Ward, District Two	82
Seventh Ward, District One	153
Seventh Ward, District Two	146
Eighth Ward, District One	307
Ninth Ward, District One	365
Tenth Ward, District One	282
Tenth Ward, District Two	170
Eleventh Ward, District One	521
Twelfth Ward, District One	443
Twelfth Ward, District Two	312
Thirteenth Ward, District One	90
Total	5,398

There are 2,227 Democrats enrolled in the city, 175 Prohibitionists and 22 Socialists. The only contest among the Democrats that will bring out votes on Primary Day will be in the Seventh ward, they being for the nomination for supervisor, and for alderman. In that ward there 270 enrolled Democrats, 120 in the first district and 150 in the second district. This ward has 299 Republicans enrolled, so between getting the Republican voters out in the contest for nomination for mayor, and the Democratic contests for supervisor and for alderman, no doubt Primary Day will be lively there.

JOURNEY TO THE FAMINE DISTRICT

(Note—the author of the subjoined dispatch is the only American correspondent who succeeded in going from Warsaw direct to Moscow. The trip took her fifty-four hours, the roads being clogged by the caravans of thousands of Polish refugees. Miss Strong made the greater part of the journey in a box car.)

(By Anna Louise Strong, special correspondent of the International News Service.)

(Copyright, 1921, by the International News Service.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Moscow, Sept. 3.—In the course of my arduous voyage from Warsaw to the soviet capital I found that Poland also is grievously stricken by food shortage and epidemics. Hundreds of Polish refugees camped on the railroad tracks. Fire has partly wiped out numberless villages, and there are areas, formerly prosperous and well ordered, that now present a desolate wilderness. Thousands are without shelter and food.

There is no chance of land cultivation, for there is no agricultural machinery. There are parts where no plow has been seen in years.

Polish quarantine headquarters at Baranowice, capable of accommodating 4,000, is now swamped by 12,000 men, women and children. Last week, according to the authorities, there were even 18,000.

Russia was in fair condition until last year, when the great drought set in, but living was still possible then. This year it is practically impossible.

All Russia is praying for rain, but no rain comes. The withered branches are symbolic of the indescribable plight that has stricken at least a hundred million people and from which there seems to be no salvation. Humans and animals are dying like flies.

The populations of whole villages are fleeing to Siberia. The food rations, meager as they have been for months, are growing smaller and smaller. There is no discrimination: everybody gets the same quantity.

From Minsk to Moscow I was fortunate in traveling in a fast special train, carrying reparation officials and doctors. The train had the long forgotten luxury of a buffet aboard, and there was free tea for all passengers.

All along the route we could see huge posters advertising shows and balls for the benefit of plague and famine sufferers.

Swarms of bare foot boys, clad only in a single garment, are working tirelessly and enthusiastically collecting help for the poorer districts.

On the train, the sole topic of conversation was, of course, the famine and its effect on the people. All agreed that the Russian population is showing a remarkable spirit and endurance. Workers are donating part of their wages to the famine sufferers.

The peasants in the Jaraslav distict, where the harvest was fairly good, have donated forty million pounds of potatoes, which constitutes their entire surplus. All they asked in return was salt, of which there is a great shortage, and a few clothes.

PLANNING TO BUILD HOUSES

So Board of Public Works Decides to Establish Grade and Lay Sanitary Sewer Through Main Street to Grandview Heights—Other Street Work.

At the meeting of the board of public works held at the city hall on Friday afternoon the board adopted an ordinance establishing the grade of Main street through Grandview Heights, and also for the construction of a sanitary sewer. These ordinances were passed at the request of a petition signed by the property owners of Grandview Heights who contemplate erecting houses on that tract but did not care to do so until the street grade was established and a sewer constructed. Superintendent Van Keuren was directed to proceed with the work.

The question of laying Willite on Elmendorf and O'Neil streets also came up at the meeting, and the city engineer was directed to ascertain the yardage in those streets, and Superintendent Van Keuren to inspect the streets to see if they were suitable for the laying of the pavement.

The board also directed that an arc light be placed at Chambers street, and one at Hasbrouck avenue and Newkirk avenue. An incandescent light will also be placed on Brook street.

Superintendent Van Keuren was directed to macadamize Prospect street from Franklin street to Greenkill avenue as soon as he has completed work on Cedar street.

Several routine matters were also taken up before the board adjourned.

MINERS' SIDE OF LABOR WAR

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Madison, W. Va., Sept. 3.—"And what's it all about?"

This was the question asked by a correspondent of the International News Service of one of the grim, determined men, leading the miners army, sitting by a camp fire not far from the front this morning.

"Why are you and your comrades going out on this march?"

The leader, whose name for obvious reasons cannot be given, stated:

"I reckon there are different reasons. But I think I speak for most of the men when I say we want to get to Mingo county by next Tuesday, and see that justice is done in the trials to begin then.

"That isn't all, however," the leader continued. "We want to put an end to the mine guard system and the Baldwin-Felts detectives in the coal mining regons. We want the fellows who are working here to have a chance to organize, so that our mines won't be idle, while these 'scab' mines are running full time. The men want to come in, but they're afraid."

"They tell me miners in Logan county are fighting now with Don Chafin," it was suggested.

"If they are its because they've been driven there," was the answer. "Americans want to live like Americans, but we can't do it now down here. The whole state government and many of the county governments are working hand in glove with the non-union operators. I reckon you might say they own 'em. Seems that way to me anyhow."

Nearby was a little band of men perhaps twenty, each with the distinctive "red band," the miners' "uniform" on his arm. Some of them were laughing and chatting as men will do, and even in times of stress, and excitement, and all about inconsequential things.

"And will you go home when federal troops get here?"

"We're not fighting Uncle Sam," was the answer, "We're fighting hoggish operators and mine thugs and spies. They're the fellows we're after. Many of us fought in the army over seas. I did myself, but this isn't what we fought for, and we hope that when the troops get here they'll see that we get a square deal."

MANY ATTENDED BIG EXHIBITION

About 1,800 pleased people attended the annual exhibition of the department of recreation held at Kingston Point yesterday afternoon.

The first number started shortly after 3 o'clock and consisted of a pretty aesthetic dance by the girls of Forsyth Park. These girls were costumed in pretty pink and blue crepe paper dresses and danced under the direction of Miss Helen Wood and to band music.

The second number, in charge of Mr. Picciano of Hasbrouck Park, was a funny game entitled "Rough Pony Ball." One boy (the pony) kneels and the other boys mount his back. The object is to pass a ball from one to the other. The ponies try to prevent this by bucking; if they do they change places with the riders. This proved to be a very funny game.

The girls and boys of the different parks then presented the twin race. Running in pairs (back to back) the forty children taking part present a very funny appearance.

Canfield Park then presented a "centipede race," ten boys astride a long pole trying to run, and the caterpillar race. Both of these events proved a source of merriment to the spectators.

Blind man's relay, by Forsyth Park, was another funny race that pleased everybody.

One of the best numbers of the entertainment was the dance, "Peggy O'Neil," by the girls of Hasbrouck Park. These children were costumed in green and yellow and were drilled in the different dance movements. Much credit can be given Miss H. Plemmons, the director, for the number.

The last and best number of the program was the medley of singing games which consisted of "Did You Ever See Your Grandma?" "I See You" and "The King of France." About 200 girls took part in this number, which was given to band music and which was received with great applause by the spectators.

This exhibition was the close of the playground work for this season and was the best that has ever been presented by the Kingston playgrounds.

The entire program showed the regular work of the season and was under the direction of Miss Olive Hammond and A. W. Buley.

Independents Manager Quits.

According to reports, says the Poughkeepsie Evening Star, A. C. Blanchard, one of the managers of the Newburgh Independents, which will play the Colonials a double header at Kingston Monday, has thrown up his job and Benny Anderson, one of the best players around the Hilly City, will take his place and run the team with E. N. Gerken, the business manager.

Kaiser Still at Doorn.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

The Hague, Sept. 3.—The ex-kaiser is still in his castle at Doorn, the International News Service was authoritatively informed today. Paris dispatches yesterday quoted the newspaper L'Intransigeant as reporting the former German emperor had escaped from his exile in Holland, presumably for a coup to regain his throne.

OPERATOR'S SIDE OF MINE LABOR WAR

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Logan, W. Va., Sept. 3.—Back of the attempted invasion of the Logan county coal fields by union miners and sympathizers from Kanawha county the New river district, lies a long story of industrial conflict.

For fifteen years the coal operators of Logan county and the upper Guyan valley have fought the United Mine Workers recently. They have prevented the unionization of this coal field at the cost of probably millions of dollars and some lives.

In an equal number of years the United Mine Workers have made continual efforts to organize the field. It has cost the union an enormous sum of money and undoubtedly some organizers have lost their lives.

This effort to organize is not confined to the Guyan valley field. Operators of Mingo and McDowell county, on the Norfolk and Western Railroad have likewise successfully fought organization.

Federal troops were present in these fields for a long period last winter.

The other fields in West Virginia are organized. These are in Kanawha county, on Coal river, New river, and the Consolidation Coal Company's field in the northern part of the state. The consolidation is controlled by former Senator Clarence Watson who has favored the union in his enormous operations.

Here is the picture that the Logan operator draws of his field:

"Since the building of the Guyan valley branch of the Chesapeake and Ohio and the opening of the Logan county coal fields, that district has produced more coal, more consistently than any other coal section in the state.

In the winter of 1919 when the big coal strike occurred the Logan non-union field produced great quantities of coal. Until the present threatening invasion of the field a normal production has been maintained in the face of short production of other fields.

Last month the Logan field produced a tonnage in excess of the combined tonnage of all the rest of the Chesapeake and Ohio system.

They say the Logan fields have been peaceful; that the miners are satisfied and that their living conditions and pay are better than in any unionized field in America.

The operators insist that they are treating their men well and paying them a higher wage than miners in the Kanawha or New River union field.

For several years Logan county, controlled by the coal operators, is believed to have been in a position to repel an invasion not only of mine union organizers, but of big bodies of armed invaders.

The operators have openly declared they will prevent unionization of their fields at any cost.

On the other hand is a bulk of claims by the United Mine Workers.

They aver that the Logan miners desire to be organized and have the advantage said to be offered by the United Mine Workers. The mine union declares that the miners in the Logan field and Mingo field are subjected to an autocratic rule inflicted by coal operators, that they are not permitted the liberties offered American citiens by the constitution and that they have no voice in their own affairs.

The United Mine Workers insist on their right to go into the Logan fields and discuss organization with the miners. Their allegation is that when organizers go into the fields of Logan they are assaulted and driven out by Logan county authorities.

PART TIME SCHOOL OPENING

Kingston's part time school opens Tuesday morning, September 6, when the girls who were in attendance last year are ordered to report to Miss Holmes of School No. 2 between 8 and 12 o'clock.

All girls and boys of 14 and 15 who are not regular attendants at school are required by law this year to attend the part time school.

The school for girls will be held at School No. 2 corner Montrepose avenue and West Chestnut street, while the boys will attend in the machine shop building on the high school grounds.

Those girls whose last names begin with "A" through "H" will report Wednesday afternoon between the hours of 1 and 5, "I" to "R" will report Thursday afternoon between 1 and 5, and "S" to "Z" report Friday morning between 8 and 12.

Boys who have not been in attendance heretofore whose last names begin with "A" to and including "H" will report Wednesday afternoon between 1 and 5 o'clock; "I" to "R" Thursday morning from 8 to 12, and "S" to "Z" Friday morning between 8 and 12. All boys who were in attendance last year will report Tuesday afternoon.

It will be beneficial to all concerned if the parents can consult with the teachers and an agreement be reached as to what the pupil is best fitted for and desires to do.

Bulls Elect Slaughter.

THE FREEMAN ON LABOR DAY

The Freeman will be issued on Labor Day, at about the hour it is issued on Saturdays. Advertising copy must be in the office very early on Monday morning.

LABOR DAY AT GLENFORD CAMP

All signs and one road leads to Glenford camp on Labor Day. This camp is delightfully situated on the east side of Glenford hill. Those visiting the camp are surprised to see such a wonderful landscape view. On a clear day one can get a view of the Berkshire hills in Massachusetts, also some of the hills in Connecticut. Farther south you can easily see the cut in the mountains where the delightful village of Mohonk is located. The hotels and houses can be distinguished on the mountain side. Farther on, on the right you can easily make out the row of houses located at Minnewaska. High Point Mountain stands out very clearly and with this tremendous sweep of scenery that can be seen from this hill one gets an inspiration well worth the trip. Nearer at view you can discover the upper reservoir, and the road separating the two reservoirs, the lower one being wholly in view of the camp. The Ulster & Delaware Railroad trains which are constantly winding their way along the hillside always look attractive. Kingston, located as it is in the Hudson valley, can easily be seen, and the city hall stands out very prominently with its red brick and high tower. After dark the head lights of the autos can be seen for a number of miles and the whirring of the motor with a clear air makes it seems as though it was an aeroplane instead of an automobile.

This is one of the most pleasant short rides that can be had anywhere in this vicinity. It is just the time of the year to get a view of this section of the country. It is less than a mile from the Glenford Church to the camp and a good hard dirt road makes it very easy for autos to reach the camp. Under the supervision of E. O. Allen, ample parking space has been reserved. This is especially a family camp for members and friends of the association and the varied interests of the visitors will be cared for by the volunteer leaders. There are many who will make this an all day outing.

The program is so arranged that anyone can come and go when he or she chooses, and still have a complete program. There are those who have asked who may come. The camp is open to all interested and it is expected that there will be at least fifty cars parked during the day and evening. This will mean that from two to three hundred people will visit the camp to enjoy its view and drink its pure water, as well as enter into the activities of the day.

The various games will be scheduled to suit the time of the people. The volley ball court will be in fine condition and there will be competition with the ladies as well as with the men. "Ye olde time" game of horse shoe will be one of the attractions and this particular game will be in charge of Ernest Kearney who well knows the art of placing them properly. A basket ball standard has been erected and this game will be one used constantly both by old and young. The game of bowling is going back to its original start. The only difference being that instead of being played on Bowling Green it will be played on Glenford hillside.

A wireless apparatus has been installed for those who desire to keep in touch with things on the outside world. This department is in charge of Ralph Miller who has spent much time in wireless telegraphy.

As to one of the principal subjects of the whole program we refer to eats. While it would not be possible to prepare for a great number not knowing exactly how many would come it was decided that each party take their own provisions. In this way all will be provided. However, the association will supply milk, tea, coffee, cocoa and rolls. The camp will be ready for visitors on Labor Day as early as 9:00 a. m., but the greater number coming have shown an indication of being there early in the afternoon and staying through the evening. A special time will be given to singing the old familiar songs about the camp fires. There will be a few fireworks, just enough to put a little flavor to the whole occasion. Those who desire to go by bus will secure seats at the Y. M. C. A. It is planned to leave the association at 10 a. m. As there is but one Labor Day a year this occasion cannot be postponed on account of rain, so plan to come. The motto of the camp is "Welcome, rain or shine."

Five Perish in Fire.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Sept. 3.—Five persons, including one entire family, perished early today when a fire, said by the police to have been of incendiary origin, swept a four story tenement building in First avenue. Their escape had been cut off by the burning away of a staircase. The dead include Vincent [illegible], aged 45, his wife, his 15 year old son and 8 year old daughter. Bernard de Lucca, 55, was the other victim.

FIRE INSURANCE RATES REDUCED

State Underwriters' Association Notifies Mayor of Reduction of Over 11 Per Cent in Mercantile Schedule for Kingston.

Mayor Canfield has received word from the Underwriters' Association of New York state of a reduction in the insurance basis rate used in mercantile schedule rating in Kingston from the present figure of forty-four cents to thirty-nine cents, a reduction of over eleven per cent. This reduction of insurance on mercantile buildings and stock will result in a saving of thousands of dollars each year to the owners.

The Underwrters' Association writes to Mayor Canfield:

"This will obtain a reduction of 5c on the flat building rate on such property and a reduction in the co-insurance building rate and in the flat and co-insurance contents rate in accordance with the table made and provided for obtaining contents and co-insurance rates from flat building rates and which is at present in use. An example given as follows:

"Present flat building rate $1.00 flat contents rate. Class "B" $1.65, co-insurance building rate $.70 co-insurance contents rate $1.15½.

"Basis rate reduced 5c, the following changes would be in order:

"Flat building rate $.95, flat contents rate $1.61 co-insurance building rate $.66½, co-insurance contents rate $1.127."

"In dollars and cents the reduction will figure:

Where no co-insurance is carried: 50c per thousand on mercantile building, 40c per thousand on mercantile stock.

Where 80 per cent co-insurance clause is carried: 35c per thousand on mercantile building, 28c per thousand on mercantile stock."

The fire department has been completely motorized during the administration of Mayor Canfield. A building code and fire prevention ordinance has been adopted by the Board. The fire alarm batteries and apparatus which have been in the upper floor of the City Hall are to be improved and removed to the rear of the Central Fire Station. As soon as this work is completed the reduction in rates will become effective. About five years ago a very substantial reduction was made in the basis rates for dwellings. The reduction ran from five to forty per cent, depending upon the character of construction. It was estimated that such total yearly reduction amounted to a saving of $10,000 to owners of dwellings.

It is difficult to determine the total saving effected by this reduction on mercantile buildings and stock. The insurance premiums paid to foreign insurance companies from this city last year was $133,250. It is estimated that a similar amount was paid to domestic companies. From this and other figures it is estimated that the saving will amount to between $5,000 and $10,000 yearly.

SERVICE PENSION INSTEAD OF BONUS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 3.—A service men's pension plan as a substitute for the so-called soldiers' bonus is being considered by administration leaders today in connection with tax revision.

While the pension plan contemplated may not be worked out immediately, or may not be presented to congress until next year, it is likely to prove one of the determining factors in whatever system of taxation is adopted finally to meet the government's estimated obligations and running expenses during the next and the following calendar year.

Administration leaders are suggesting that Senator Smoot's plan for a modified commodities sales tax in the guise of a manufacturers' tax of three per cent, be held back as a possible means of financing the pension plan when the time is ripe for it.

The suggestion that the sales tax might be used to raise revenue necessary to provide ex-service men with pensions in lieu of the bonus denied them is said by Republican senators closely associated with the administration to have been discussed with President Harding by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon this week.

Secretary Mellon and Republican House Leader Mondell are both credited by these senators with seeking to have the Smoot plan deferred so that the administration could fall back upon it when it is ready to put the proposed pension plan into operation.

Since Senator Smoot's announcement of his new tax plan, an elaboration of the sales tax sale, he and other Republican members of the senate finance committee have been deluged with messages in commendation of it. Even Republican senators who were unenthusiastic regarding it, stated that their minds are now open as to the merits claimed for it.

The openness of mind, coupled with the administration leaders' suggestion that the Smoot plan might be well used later on as a possible source of revenue for the proposed service men's pension plan, is construed by its advocates as additional evidence that the sales tax idea will prevail eventually.

GOMPERS WANTS A CONFERENCE

Asks President Harding to Call One to Consider Means for Ending West Virginia Labor Trouble.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Sept. 3.—President Harding today was asked by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and James Lord, head of the mining department of the Federation, to call a joint conference of West Virginia miners and operators to consider means for a final end of the labor troubles there.

Gompers and Lord supported the similar suggestion made by James L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers of America.

The president informed the labor leaders that until authority of the United States has been established in West Virginia, and order restored, he does not feel that he can act further. He said his first duty is the reestablishment of peace and order.

Gompers told the president that even though peace may be restored in the present situation that it will not settle the long drawn out labor warfare and he urged that the government take steps to wipe out the causes of controversy between the miners and operators. He suggested that the president should not only call the joint conference but should have a representative upon it.

MINERS PREPARE TO RETURN HOME

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 3.—Word has reached here that with the arrival of the federal troops the miners are moving back from their entrenched positions in the mountains preparatory to returning to their homes.

The feeling is general here that the end of the fighting, if it already has not come, is in sight. It is believed today will mark the end of hostilities.

The miners, it is said, feel that with federal troops on the scene they will be able to return safely to their homes with the assurance that their interests will be protected.

The arrival of the troops was welcomed by the miners, it was reported here.

PEACEFUL DAY IN WEST VIRGINIA

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Logan, W. Va., Sept. 3.—The daybreak danger period passed this morning without the general offensive of miners that has marked the last three days.

The military authorities took this as a hopeful indication that the miners army has decided to suspend hostilities in anticipation of the arrival of federal troops.

However, vigilance was not relaxed. New reliefs were sent out under Colonel Jackson Arnold to Blair Mountain this morning. The battle has radiated around this stronghold and Crooked Creek.

It was rumored that Arnold would launch an offensive this morning to clear Blair of miners. The little mountain town like Verdun, lies in the shadow of the mountain. In it the miners have maintained positions for four days.

They have made periodical sallies out of the town, attacking the Loganites on the hill top. The hills surrounding Blair mountain are said to be filled with miners' snipers.

Red Top the Rooster Makes a Specialty of Curling Chickens' Feathers

"A Little Sign."

"'I don't like creatures who put on airs,' he said, 'and who pretend to be friendly when they aren't. Some creatures think they're doing a favor if they so much as bother to notice one.

"'There was a person who came to the farm the other day and who said:

"'"Hello Rooster," and then he added a moment later:

"'"I believe in being friendly with all creatures." He said it in the most condescending and superior fashion you can imagine. And of course, when he was thinking so much about his friendliness it didn't amount to much. He was really a snob without even the brains to see that he was.

"'I'd rather creatures didn't notice me at all than to think they were doing such a favor when they merely speak to me. Cock-a-doodle-do, they've no right to be so high and mighty. They can't crow!'

"'Cock-a-doodle do,' said Crown Rooster, 'that is very true. They can't do that.'

"'What have you been doing lately?' asked Crown Rooster, after a minute.

"'I haven't happened to notice because I have been so busy myself.'

"'Well,' said Red Top, 'I started a Feather Dressing Parlor.'

"'Cock-a-doodle-do, what?' asked Crown Rooster.

"'I knew that many children like to have their hair curled, and I thought perhaps the chickens would feel the same way about it.

"'So I stood upon yonder fence, and I crowed and I crowed and I crowed.

"'I told the mothers to bring the chicks and I would curl the feathers most beautifully. I hung out a little sign of a leaf on a twig, and I wrote upon the sign in my rooster fashion.

"'"Red Top, the Rooster, Makes a Specialty of Curling Chickens' Feathers."'

"'But when did you ever make a specialty of that?' asked Crown Rooster.

"'Never,' said Red Top, 'but I thought I might just as well begin. Well, all the Mother Hens came along and asked me what I really meant to do.

"'I told them I wouldn't be able to answer that question until I had commenced my work.

"'But they said they didn't think I had better commence because they said that I'd be apt to set up a millinery shop with chicken feathers, and they didn't want me to do that with the feathers from their children.

"'Then they said that it would look very badly if anyone saw me with a lot of ends of feathers about me. They'd think I was a very cruel, wicked rooster, and they wouldn't know I was in the Chicken Feather Curling Business.

"'So I decided to give up that work and to dig worms instead. I've been digging worms ever since.'

"'So have I,' said Crown Rooster. Well, I fancy you were wise to give up your idea of curling chickens' feathers, for it's all very well to see little girls with curls, but chickens are different.

"All the Mother Hens."

"'Chickens don't wear bright hair ribbons, so they don't need to have their feathers curled to show them off.

"'Ah, no, creatures had better stay the way they're supposed to be.'

"'That is so,' agreed Red Top, 'that is so.'

"'But why were you crowing so when I came along?' asked Crown Rooster.

"'I was crowing my thoughts,' said Red Top. 'If I were a person I'd speak my thoughts, but as I'm a rooster I crow them; yes, that is what I do.'

"'I understand,' said Crown Rooster, 'for I do the same, and now crow some more and tell me some more of your thoughts, for I am an interested listener; yes, I'm an interested rooster listener.'"

The KITCHEN CABINET

He who would bring home the wealth of the Indies must carry the wealth of the Indies with him, says the Spanish proverb. So it is in traveling: a man must carry knowledge with him if he would bring home knowledge.

HOT WEATHER GOOD THINGS.

A good-sized fowl is not always made tender by ordinary cooking. The following method is a good one: Cut the fowl in pieces at the joints, wash and dry, roll in seasoned flour and fry brown in hot fat. Put into a baking pan, sprinkle over it one half cupful of celery and two tablespoonfuls of minced onion. Cover with hot water, place another pan over it and cook in the oven until tender. More water may be needed if the chicken is an old one.

Cottage Chicken.—To two cupfuls of cooked chicken, cut in pieces, add one cupful of cooked macaroni, one-half a large canned pimento, one half of a grated onion. Prepare a white sauce, using one cupful each of milk and chicken broth, three level tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour with one teaspoonful of salt, mix with the first combination and cover with a rich biscuit dough. To keep the gravy from going into the crust, place an inverted cup or small bowl, well greased, in the center of the dish before pouring in the gravy. The gravy will thus go under the cup. Loosen the crust and remove the bowl before serving.

Watermelon Cocktail.—Cut a chilled melon into thick slices, remove the seeds and cut out with a vegetable stamp or a potato cutter into balls or shapes. Sprinkle with a little powdered sugar and serve in stemmed glasses as a beginning for a luncheon or dinner.

Peach Betty.—Use the soft crumbs from the center of a stale loaf of bread. Mix three cupfuls of crumbs with one-half cupful of melted butter. Have ready a pint and a half of sliced peaches. Put the buttered crumbs and fruit in layers in a baking dish, sprinkle each layer with sugar, grated orange or lemon peel. Bake one hour. Cover the dish during the first half of the cooking, but remove to brown the crumbs. Serve hot, with sugar and cream. Apples may be used in place of peaches, or any juicy fruit.

Lightning Rods.

If a lightning rod is properly grounded, the danger arising from the use of non-insulated fasteners is negligible. Years ago the use of glass insulators set in outriggers was very common. It was a good but perhaps an unnecessary practice. If a rod is well grounded in wet earth a bolt of lightning is not likely to leave a good conductor and enter a poor one.

Stories of Great Scouts

By Elmo Scott Watson

©, Western Newspaper Union

SHARPE GROVER, "BEST SCOUT GOVERNMENT EVER HAD"

"The best scout the government ever had," said some of the army officers for whom Sharpe Grover scouted during the Indian wars in Kansas in 1867-68, and more than once he showed himself worthy of the title. He had married a Sioux woman, and lived with the tribe for years. He could speak their language and knew their ways. As a trailer and reader of signs, Grover was without a peer.

He could tell how long since the tracks had been made, whether they were by horses or ponies, shod or unshod; how many were ridden, how many were driven, whether it was a war party or one moving from one camp to another.

When the Sioux went on the warpath in 1866, Grover left them and joined the army as a scout for Custer. In August, 1868, with Billy Comstock, another noted scout, he visited the camp of Chief Turkey Leg of the Cheyennes, whose warriors were supposed to be friendly. One of the Indians, however, saw the fine pearl-handled revolver carried by Comstock and determined to have it. When the scouts left the camp seven Cheyennes rode away with them.

While engaged in friendly conversation, the Indians suddenly dropped to the rear and opened fire. Comstock was killed instantly and Grover badly wounded, but lying on the ground and making a desperate defense of Comstock's body, he fought off the Indians until nightfall and escaped.

The next month Grover joined Gen. G. A. Forsyth's band of scouts and was with them at the celebrated Beecher's Island fight. As Roman Nose's warriors shouted to each other, Grover understood everything they said, and told Forsyth what they were planning to do. After the biggest charge of the Sioux and Cheyennes had been turned back, Forsyth turned to Grover and said: "Can they do better than that, Grover?"

"I have been on the plains, man and boy, for 30 years, and I never saw such a charge before," was the scout's reply. "I think they have done their level best."

"All right, we're good for them, then," said Forsyth.

For years the fact that Grover was with Forsyth that day was kept from the Indians, for he was friendly with them, and they would have killed him without mercy, had they known. Later they did learn it and attempted several times to kill him, but he always escaped. Unfortunately Grover drank heavily, and a few years after the Beecher fight he was killed in a row at Pond City, near Fort Wallace, an inglorious end for so great a scout.

The Guileless Yokel.

James R. Howard, president of the Farm Bureau federation, said in Washington the other day:

"The farmer is going to market his own product hereafter. The farmer of the past, who let the middleman collar all the profit of the farm, was more guileless than Cornelius Husk.

"Corn Husk, you know, came to New York to see his uncle. He got off at the Pennsylvania station and asked a policeman how long a walk it was to his uncle's place.

"'You'd better take the elevated,' the policeman said, handing back the card with the address on it. 'It's a seven-mile walk to where you're going.'

"'Well, by crimus, I'll walk her, anyhow,' said Corn Husk. 'Seven miles, though! Say, ain't there no short cut across the fields?'"

ONE CENT A WORD

Oman and Its People

Native Women of Oman.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

But a step from lands first and longest known in the history of the world—Egypt, Babylon, Palestine—Arabia remains one of the world's most unknown regions. And in one of its least known corners is the independent state of Oman. Historically, politically and geographically, Oman has always been isolated from the rest of Arabia. Ever since the days of the caliphate, so far as communication with other Arabs is concerned, Oman was practically an island, with a sea of water on two sides and a sea of sand—the great Arabian desert—on the other. As a result, the people are even more primitive in their habits than the Arabs generally; and only recently have other towns than Muscat, the capital, opened their eyes to the world.

Oman is a relatively narrow strip of coast, bowed around the irregular eastern tip of Arabia. To the northwest it extends half way along the southern shore of the Persian gulf, into the head of which empty the historic Tigris and Euphrates rivers. From there it extends in a crooked, unbroken strip of varying width for nearly 1,000 miles, its southwestern extremity reaching almost to the mid point of the flaring south shore of the Arabian peninsula.

The state has an area of 82,000 square miles, almost twice that of Pennsylvania. Although generally accepted statistics place the population at 800,000, Colonel Miles, who has seen more of the interior than any other recent traveler, estimates it at over 1,000,000. The capital, Muscat, and the adjoining town of Mutrah, have together about 25,000 inhabitants. The ancient capital, Rostak, which is inland, declined in importance after the Portuguese, during the remarkable growth of their colonial power in the Sixteenth century, pushed around the Cape of Good Hope and northward and eastward, occupying Muscat. The Portuguese remained in possession of this metropolis of Oman from 1508 until the middle of the Seventeenth century.

Was Almost an Empire.

The conquerors of Oman who gave it its present ruling family came from Yemen on the other side of Arabia. Ahmed bin Sa'eed, the leader, captured Muscat in 1741. The present sultan and iman, who came to the throne in 1913, is a descendant of this Eighteenth century conqueror.

At the beginning of the Nineteenth century, before European powers had determined upon the almost complete parceling out of Africa, Oman was almost an empire. It extended over a large part of Arabia, the islands to the north of Arabia in the Persian gulf, a strip of the southern coast of Persia, and a strip of the Indian ocean coast of Africa from the northeastern point near the entrance to the Red sea almost half way to the Cape of Good Hope. This African territory, including Zanzibar, comprised large parts of what later became Italian Somaliland, British East Africa and German East Africa. It also included the important island of Socotra at the mouth of the Gulf of Aden, now under British control.

At that time the slave trade was flourishing, and it was the Arabs of Oman who explored the great interior of Africa long before the days of Speke and Livingstone. On the death in 1856 of Oman's "Alexander," the Sultan Sa'eed, the empire began to break up, one son becoming sultan of Zanzibar and another sultan of the Arabian territory. Subsequently all Asiatic possessions outside Arabia were lost, except a few islands in the Persian gulf. About this time Oman came under the virtual protection of Great Britain through the Indian government, and a British consul and political agent has since been maintained at Muscat.

One of the most picturesque parts of Oman is the so-called Pirate coast, just within the great point of land which almost closes the mouth of the Persian gulf, the sailing ground of Sinbad the Sailor. This region was a base of operation for pirates as troublesome in the first half of the Nineteenth century of the Indian and Persian trade as were the Caribbean pirate nests to the ships that plied between Panama and Europe a century or so earlier. The inhabitants of the Pirate coast were extremely fanatical as well, which added to their trouble-making qualities. British gunboats, with the assistance of Indian forces put an end to the depredations, and the one-time pirates of this region have now mostly turned to pearl diving for a living.

Trip Through the Country.

A journey from the Pirate coast across the base of the great point of Oman to Sohr or some of the adjacent ports, a trip of about 100 miles, gives an excellent idea of the back country of this little-known state. Caravans making this trip usually travel at night and rest under whatever shade may be found during the day. On the second day one passes villages and cultivated fields and at night sleeps surrounded by thousands of sheep and goats, driven in by Bedouin lasses from their mountain pastures. Even among these shepherds one finds readers, and colporteurs sell books wherever the camels halt long enough to strike a bargain. In entering the narrow pass of Hitta, the guides go ahead mounted, with rifles loaded and cocked.

Travelers are not troubled with the heat at night, but during the day it is intense, and it is refreshing to come to an oasis (common in this part of Oman), where water bursts from a big spring, and trees and flowers grow in luxury. In the mountainous parts of Oman the roads run almost invariably along the wady beds; sometimes these are sandy water courses; again deep, rocky ravines or broad, fertile valleys. Vegetation generally is tolerably abundant. Tamarisks, oleanders, euphorbias, and acacias are the most common trees and shrubs.

Some of It Unexplored.

Although some travelers have reached the edge of the Oman desert, all the country beyond is still largely terra incognita. No one has ever made the journey beyond the range of mountains or solved the mystery of western Oman, which is still a blank on the best maps; nor is anything known of the land 100 miles southwest of Muscat save by Arab hearsay.

The most populous and fertile district of the highlands of Oman is Jebel Akhdar, which is also the best known. The fertility of this region is wonderful and in striking contrast with the barren rocks of so large a part of the coast. With a semi-tropical climate, an elevation of 3,000 to 5,000 feet, and abundant springs, the wadys and oases of Oman have awakened the delight and amazement of every traveler who has ventured to explore them. Water, the one priceless treasure in all Arabia, here issues in perennial streams from many rocky clefts, and is most carefully husbanded by the ingenuity of the people for wide irrigation by means of canals or watercourses called falej.

Except along the Pirate coast the Arabs of Oman are remarkably free from fanaticism, simple in their habits, and wonderful in their hospitality. Most of them belong to the Abadhi sect, which has many beliefs in common with Christianity.

AGAIN THE OLD DEBATE.

A man of the name of Brandon went to his death in New Jersey's electric chair recently, protesting to his last breath that he was innocent of the two murders with which he was charged and of which he had been duly convicted. There is an old saying that no man would die with a lie on his lips, but this can be only a matter of opinion. It is reasonable enough to suppose that not a few men would lie at the very gates of death if they thought that by so doing they could lessen the disgrace brought upon their families, particularly if they doubted or disbelieved in the existence of a future life. Yet Brandon's protestation of innocence to the last is reported to have caused considerable disturbance of mind in New Jersey and to have brought about another discussion of capital punishment as well as a renewed demand for its abolition.

For the reason stated there is less in Brandon's case to justify such discussion than there has been in some previous cases. Men have been convicted on circumstantial evidence and executed who afterward were proved innocent by the confession of the real criminals. A particularly notable case of this kind was brought to light in England a few years ago. Nearly half a century after he was hanged the innocent sufferer was cleared by the confession of the real murderer, whereupon the bones of the innocent were transferred with great pomp and circumstance to consecrated ground, a remorseful legal establishment seeking thus to undo in some small part the wrong to a cruelly misused family. The possibility of such a dreadful mistake accounts for the reluctance of juries to render a verdict calling for the death penalty, and this reluctance renders it extremely difficult to reach conclusions as to what extent the death penalty checks murder.

Opponents of the death penalty argue that it does not check murder. On the other hand it is contended that the punishment of death is less of a deterrent than it might be because so few murderers are hanged or electrocuted. Some light is thrown on the subject by comparisons of the criminal statistics of different countries. Such comparisons show that in England, for example, where there are proportionately many more applications of the death penalty, murders also are much fewer proportionately. To this the opponents answer that there are other explanations of the difference. Of one thing at least we can feel reasonably assured, and that is that the number of murderers who escape the death penalty is vastly greater than the number of innocent victims of the law's mistakes. The civilized world has heard this question debated ever since Cicero contended that the Gods alone should take human life, and it is not unlikely that the discussion will be continued for another 2,000 years. At present the United States as a whole is said to be no nearer the abolition of capital punishment than it was fifty years ago.

There is an impression that our separate treaty is more considerate of Germany than is the treaty of Versailles. The Chicago Tribune, for example, notes that the new treaty keeps us clear of "the extreme commitments of the Versailles treaty." But a different view is expressed by those who have taken the trouble to tackle the 200 pages of the Versailles document in order to see just what parts are retained and insisted on, these parts not being quoted and only indicated by number in the new treaty. Such investigation shows that the parts of the Versailles document insisted on include Germany's enforced disarmament on land, sea and in the air; surrender of all her overseas possessions; her admission of guilty responsibility for the war; full reparation to be made by her; agreement that foreign troops, including Americans, shall occupy the Rhine bridgeheads for fifteen years as "a guarantee for the execution of the treaty."

The sale of the 205 wooden ships was good riddance to bad rubbish. While the price was ridiculously low the cost of upkeep was $600,000 annually. We need not write the loss off to the war, but to the Wilson Administration which persisted in building these boats in the face of expert advice to the contrary. This nation will be paying interest on Democratic debts for more than a generation to come, and every time a taxpayer goes down into his pocket to meet his share of the expense he will probably say, "he didn't keep us out of war, but he did keep us in debt."

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. What is the biggest fish in the world, also the smallest?

Probably the biggest is a huge shark, Cetorhinus, some specimens of which go to thirty-six feet. (A whale one hundred feet long is not unknown, but it is a mammal, not a fish.) The tiny goby, Mistichthys, often barely half an inch long, is at the other end of the size-scale. The very tiniest goby come from the Philippines, and is a fascinating aquarium tenant.

2. Does any bird build its nest on the water?

Practically so. The pied-billed grebe makes a sort of raft, using stems of water plants, and so does the horned grebe. This is sometimes lightly anchored to the reeds among which is is placed, but at times it actually floats independent of the base. A grackle in the south often builds in a bush that grows in the water.

3. Please explain if the grocery store artichoke is the same as the Jerusalem artichoke recently mentioned in these Natures Notes.

No. The market artichoke is the flower head of a plant somewhat resembling a thistle. Cynara scolymus. This "flower" has closely folded bracts with fleshy bases, making a ball-shaped head. The whole flower-head is boiled and the fleshy bases, which form a core, is the part eaten. The Jerusalem artichoke is an underground tuber.

WHERE JUSTICE NEEDED EYES

Seventeen Year Old Wife Sentenced to Three Years in Institution for "Stealing" Husband's Fountain Pen When Indignant Villagers Intervene—Highway Robbers Got Off Lightly.

Because Justice is pictured as being blindfolded, she sometimes stubs her toes. A recent Delaware county case has attracted much attention in this section. Alton Bean, residing at Masonville, was arrested recently on complaint of his wife, who charged he was not supporting her or their child. He was placed on probation for two years and directed to pay $4 per week for the support of the child.

Then Mr. Bean brought a countercharge against his wife, who is only 17 years old, accusing her of stealing his fountain pen. She was advised to plead guilty upon an officer's assurance that she would be allowed to go with a warning, instead of which she was sentenced to the house of refuge at Albion. She was in the Delhi jail awaiting the arrival of an attendant from Albion when indignant Masonville citizens took up the case and retained the services of a lawyer who procured the woman's release on bail. From the young wife's story she did not steal her husband's pen. On account of his ill treatment of the child she decided to leave him. A girl in the home packed her suit case and included among the articles her husband's fountain pen, which he later claimed she stole.

Commenting on the case editorially, the Delaware Express says:

"We believe it was only last summer that a band of three highwaymen held up at the point of a gun a Fleischmanns hotel man and subtracted several hundred dollars from his earthly possessions. The bandits were later caught and two of them pleaded guilty and were sentenced to two years in prison—and the sentence suspended. The third elected to stand trial—and he in turn was convicted on the evidence and likewise had a sentence suspended. These birds of prey had only a little annoyance for a crime altogether too prevalent.

"Lucky bandits. Had they fallen into other hands no one can estimate what might have befallen them. Take the case, for instance, of the seventeen-year-old girl who felt the wrath of Officer Phelps last week. Accused of stealing a fountain pen from none other than her husband, this soul-seared criminal was caught and whisked before a Masonville justice of the peace. Lest time might be wasted in weighing the evidence, or perhaps lest she might procure counsel, she was advised to plead guilty upon the officer's assurance that she would then be let go with a warning. She did so.

"And then came a change in the official mind—and the young wife was sentenced to a correctional institution for three years. If it had not been for the intervention of outraged citizens she might be there now—and for three years to come. Fortunately she was released on bail when a lawyer got hold of the facts, and took the case. Aside from the novelty of the crime this case deserves the careful study of those who think too great leniency is being shown criminals. A kindly warning for those who resort to highway robbery—three years incarceration for a wife who takes her husband's fountain pen without permission. It makes no wonder what Old Bill Shakespeare meant when he wrote that

"'The quality of mercy is not strained.'

"But then, in fairness it must be admitted that 'Shakespeare' never knew Officer Phelps—nor yet a Masonville justice of the peace."

Loud wailed a dame on deck.
As they heaved the lead
The skipper said.
"It allus has, by heck!"

TODAY HOTTEST SEPTEMBER 3

With thermometers at noon registering 98 degrees today was the hottest September 3 in many years. In fact there was hardly any day this summer that was hotter than today, and as the afternoon advanced the heat grew even more intense as the sun climbed higher in the heavens.

Without question this past summer has been one of the most remarkable as far as warm weather was concerned that has been experienced in many years. Flowers, fruit and vegetables matured several weeks earlier than in other years.

About this time the delicious refreshments began to arrive and all were invited to sit down and partake of the bounteous repast, to which all did justice. HOLD WOMAN FOR GRAND JURY

At the close of the hearing in the case of Harry Smith against Mrs. Annie Rightmyer, before Justice H. D. Abeel, at Saugerties, Thursday afternoon, the justice held her to await the action of the grand jury, and she was released on bail of $300, her counsel, George F. Kaufman, becoming her surety.

Mrs. Rightmyer was charged with assault in the second degree, it being alleged she had struck Smith with an ax and cut his hand.

Smith and Mrs. Rightmyer reside in Malden, and the bone of contention in the case is that Smith drives over a piece of land to get to his home, which she alleges belongs to her, and because Smith would not desist when ordered not to cross the land, it is alleged she went for him with an ax and in fending the blow had his hand cut. Grant M. Brinnier appeared for Smith. Miss Helen Flicker, a witness for Smith, testified as to Mrs. Rightmyer abusing Smith.

Tracing British Names.

The word Scot, as applied to those living north of the Tweed, is said to have an interesting history. The word is the same as "Scythian" in etymology; the root of both is "sct." The Greeks had no "c" in their alphabet, and would change "t" into "th," so that the root became "ckth;" by adding a phonetic vowel we get "skuth-ai" (Scythians) and "Scoth-ai" (Scoths). The Welsh disliked "s" at the beginning of a word and would change it to "ys;" they would also change "c" or "k" into "g;" and "th" into "d." Therefore the Welsh root became "Ysgd," and "Skoth" would become "Ysgod." Now the Saxons would change the "g" back to "c" and the "d" to "t;" and would cut off the Welsh "y;" whence the word became "Scot." Before the Third century Scotland was called Caledonia or Alban; England, of course, is Albion.

Proud of Her "Fevvers."

Little Maude very much admired her papa's chickens. Observing for the first time the little hairs on her arms, she ran very excitedly to her mamma, saying: "See! Mamma, see! I dot some fevvers, I dot some fevvers."

In Appreciation.

Through the columns of this paper we wish to thank our many and kind friends for the sympathy and many beautiful floral pieces. We did all we could but God's will, not ours, be done.

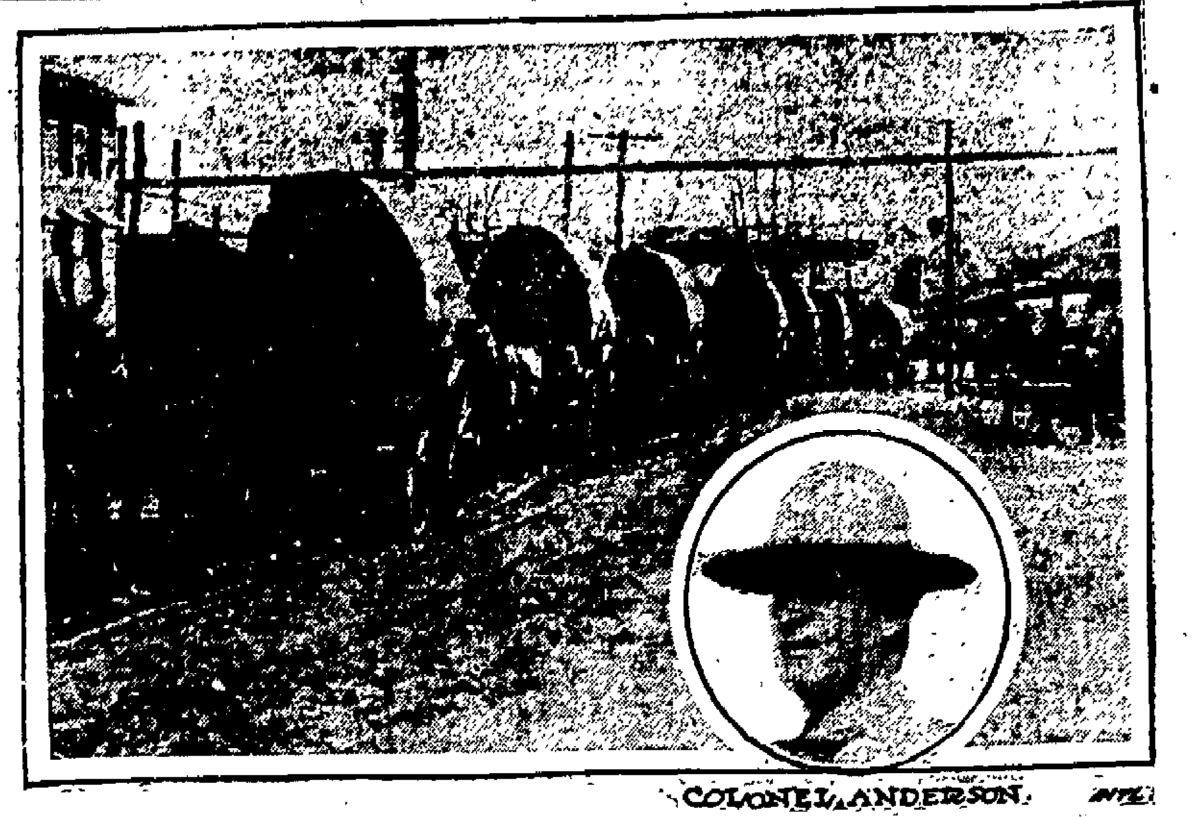
DIED.

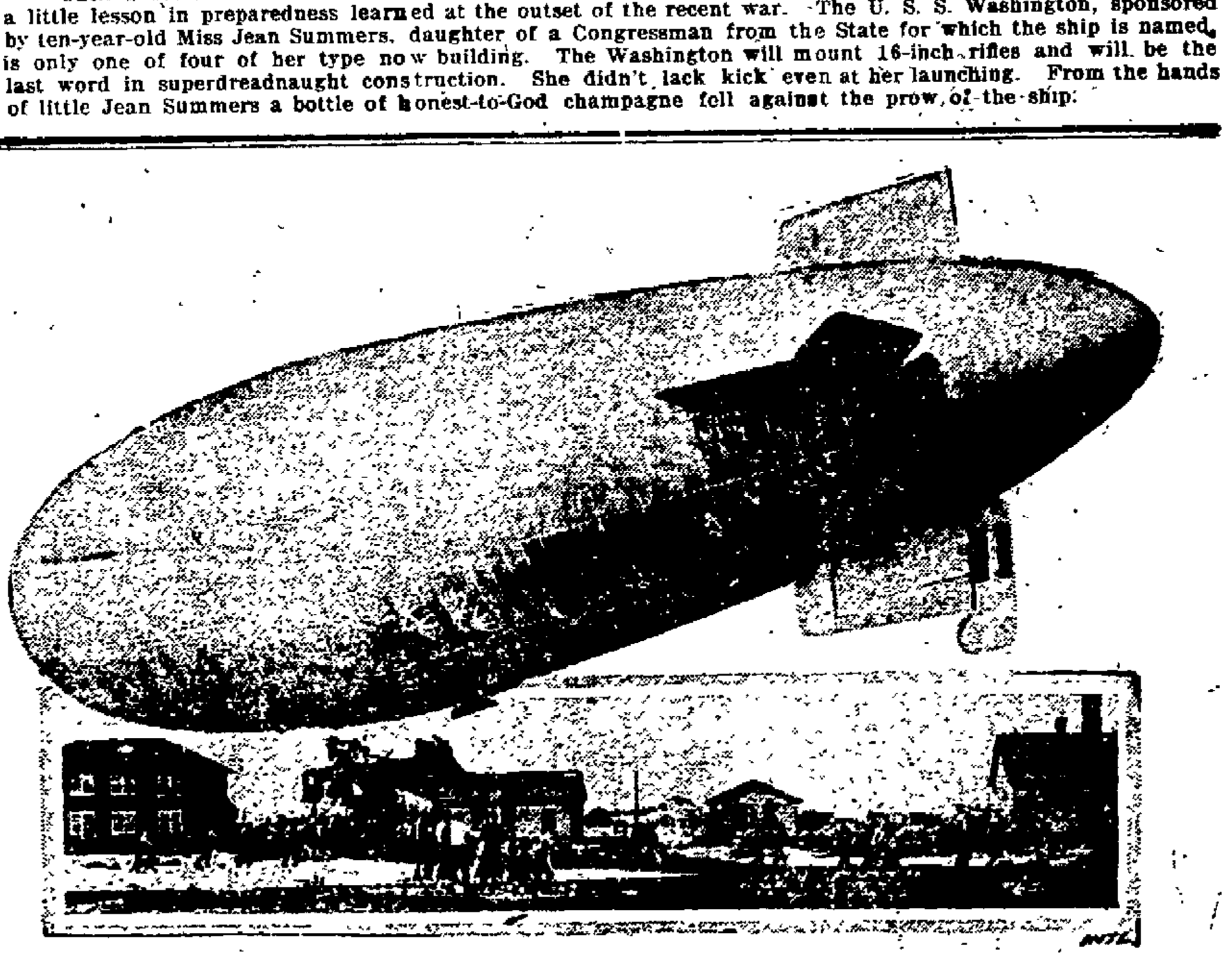
DECKER—Suddenly in this city Saturday, Sept. 2, 1921, Frank, beloved husband of Rosa Decker, in his 52nd year.

Relatives and friends are invited to attend the funeral from his late home, 54 Foxhall avenue, Sunday morning at 10:30. Interment at the Montrepose cemetery. Please omit flowers.



Horses will penetrate the mountain fastnesses of West Virginia, where miners and deputy sheriffs are battling in one of the most sanguinary contests in American industrial history. Colonel Anderson, in command of the troops at Camp Dix who were ordered to the Mingo front, is shown in the inset. Each side declared its willingness to have martial law come to West Virginia, and each side regards its coming as a victory.

Until a decision is reached by the Disarmament Conference Uncle Sam is remembering and acting upon a little lesson in preparedness learned at the outset of the recent war. The U. S. S. Washington, sponsored by ten-year-old Miss Jean Summers, daughter of a Congressman from the State for which the ship is named, is only one of four of her type now building. The Washington will mount 16-inch rifles and will be the last word in superdreadnaught construction. She didn't lack kick even at her launching. From the hands of little Jean Summers a bottle of honest-to-God champagne fell against the prow of the ship.



As if unable to survive the awful destruction of her sister airship in England, D-6, largest dirigible in the United States Navy, burned at her hangar, in Rockaway, New York. Divers were still at work on the wreck of the ZR-2, in the Humber River, England, when the flash came that the D-6 was in flames. Despite all that the men in charge could do, the airship and hangar were completely destroyed. No one was hurt. The picture shows the D-6 just before the fire, as the men were preparing to take her to the great hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., where it was intended that both the D-6 and the ZR-2 should be permanently stationed. As a result of the fire which destroyed the D-6, Henry Woodhouse, president of nation-wide aircraft organizations, has urged that all contracts for airships be cancelled by the Government.

Although the news dispatches tell of serious rioting in India, there has been no cancellation of the trip which the Prince of Wales is to make to the Hindu peninsula. When he arrives this beautiful matron, the Countess of Cromer, will be his chief hostess. Her husband will be chief of the prince's personal staff.

WORKERS TO AID EX-SERVICE MEN

Irving V. E. Barth States That Representatives From The Veterans' Bureau Will Be Here October 15 And 17.

A "Flying Squadron" of adjustors from the Veterans' Bureau, the new department created by the Sweet Bill, recently enacted into law, combining vocational training, compensation and hospitalization bureau of the War Risk Bureau, under one head, will be in Kingston October 15th and 17th and in Catskill October 13th and 15th, and will hear the claims of disabled ex-service men. It is urged that every veteran who has a claim pending with the Government, who is in need of medical treatment, hospital care, compensation, or vocational training, present his claim to the adjustors, according to Irving V. E. Barth, who was in Kingston today.

The "Flying Squadron" is acting in this district under the direction of Colonel Charles E. Walsh, head of the Second District of the Veterans Bureau. Colonel Walsh has given personal attention to veterans and their cases in this district. The "Flying Squadron" will do all in their power to assist ex-service men to prosecute their claims before the Bureau. It is the intention of the Bureau officials to clean up all claims against the government and to place the veterans on a secure footing before the hearings in this section are terminated.

The advance agent of the "Flying Squadron" will confer with the American Legion heads here preparatory to the arrival of the adjustors, and will make arrangements for the hearings.

The "Flying Squadron" began at Yonkers and passed up along the east bank of the Hudson, visiting the larger towns and cities, and on its return from the western and central part of this state will take up the claims of men living in towns and cities along the west bank of the Hudson.

ESOPUS.

Esopus, Sept. 2.—Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. G. E. Wright, D. D., pastor. Preaching service 3 o'clock. Sunday School 2.30. Epworth League devotional meeting at 7:30. Topic "Thy Will Be Done—With My Mind." Leader, Mrs. Elmer Lund.

J. P. Ganoung and family returned to their home on Monday of this week. [illegible] friends are exceedingly glad to have them in their accustomed place once more.

A little son arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Van Demark on Sunday afternoon last.

Mrs. Elmer Lund and two children Mildred and Alton are enjoying a visit in New York city and Larchmont this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harlowe McLean and Miss Marie Weber motored to Samsonville to spend the week-end with Mrs. McLean's mother, Mrs. W. G. Moore.

According to schedule the Methodist Sunday School had their annual picnic on Thursday. Merritt Every of Port Ewen with his large Sheridan car and Mrs. Alex Smih with her touring car transported the party to Forsyth Park. Mervin Garrison and mother, Mrs. Garrison, Mrs. Arthur Jones and little daughter Doris also made the trip in Mr. Garrison's car. The day was thoroughly enjoyed by all. A bounteous supply of home made ice cream, sandwiches and cake was served at noon, and the afternoon was spent playing games and making use of the various devices provided for the entertainment of children at the park. Just before leaving a second "round" of cream was served which was very refreshing previous to the trip home. Everybody arrived in the best of spirits and the day will be regarded as one of the bright spots in the memory of each of the attendants.

Memorial for Baxter Dogs.

At the summer home of Governor Baxter of Maine on Mackworth island, Casco bay, are buried all the dogs owned by him which have died since 1887, says a Boston dispatch to the New York Times. The governor is now having made a bronze tablet, giving the names and record of these animals. This will rest on the face of a big granite bowlder, around which the dogs have been buried.

The dogs were all of the same family and strain of Irish setters. The first and great grandmother was Glencora, given to the governor in 1887 by his father, the late James P. Baxter of Portland, Me.

The governor has raised about seventy-five of these dogs, and while he has sold a few, most of those he has not kept have been given to friends.

LACE MILLS WIN LAST GAME

Last night at Hasbrouck Park the Lace Mills defeated the Peter Schuylers by a score of 6-3, and secured for themselves third place in the final Industrial League standing. They have won six and lost 4, while the cigar makers have won four and lost six.

Cragin did the pitching for Peter Schuylers and he was very steady, but the support accorded him was uncertain, particularly in the first, third and fifth innings, when costly errors in both infield and outfield netted runs to the Lace Mills. Bedford did his usual even work, except in the second, when Cragin led off with a long center field hit with a particularly good roll to it, carrying to the outskirts of the field and was credited with a "homer." Nichols followed with a two bagger to left and scored on Cassidy's single to right. Poloskie also made a single and with two men on bases, two runs already in, and only one out, Bedford was in a difficult position. He pulled out, however, by striking out Doyle and Warren. The score:

Lace Mills	3	0	2	0	1—6
Peter Schuyler	0	2	0	0	1—3

Two base hit, R. Norton, Nichols, J. Jordan, Boker Home run, Cragin. Sacrifice hits, Atkins, W. Jordan, Cassidy, Cragin Hits off Cragin, 3; Bedford, 7. Stolen bases, Bedford, Leudtke, Nichols. Left on bases, Peter Schuyler, 5; Lace Mills, 3. Base on balls, off Cragin, 1; Bedford, 1. Strike outs, by Cragin, 5; Bedford, 5. First base on errors, Peter Schuyler, 1; Lace Mills, 4. Umpire, Jordan.

Homers by Ruth, Peck and Meusel, coupled with Hoyt's fine pitching, gave the Yanks a victory over the Senators.

The Indians went on the warpath, scoring a dozen runs off three young Tiger pitchers by the Browns. Bagby held the Detroiters safe.

Three singles and a double was Sisler's share of the hits made off White Sox pitchers by the Browns. Schocker blanked Chicago.

The Cardinals knocked the Pirates for a gang plank at Pittsburgh. Fournier doubled and Stock singled, making the only run of the game in the eighth inning.

With Alexander the great doing the mound chores the Cubs trimmed Cincinnati.

Foster, Menosky and Pratt helped Joe Bush to his victory over the Athletics in Boston.

DOUBLE HEADER HERE LABOR DAY

Labor Day will see the Colonials engaged in two more games to decide the supremacy of the Hudson Valley. The Independents of Newburgh will appear at the Athletic Field in both a morning and an afternoon contest.

The Independents represent the fastest talent available in the Hilly City, and a little better pitching should cause trouble for any of the league teams. At the present time the pitching staff consists of DeMott and Brundage, both clever twirlers, but who have been getting some bad breaks in their recent games. Efforts are being made by the Independent management to secure one or two more capable boxmen.

No game is scheduled Sunday for the Colonials, and their pitching department should be in good fettle for the league games on Monday.

ON-A-JOB, OFF-A-JOB JIM!

Being a Story

Of how Jim got on a job and why he got off it again.

Jim thought his jobs at the unfinished house were over, and approached the boss who was conversing with the elderly owner of the building.

"I don't like this way of constructing a house," the owner was saying. "There are all the window and door frames exposed to the weather; the timbers under the porch floors should be creosoted—"

"I can't get the carpenters to paint. You know that,—and there isn't enough work to keep a regular painter busy, but—wait a bit! I've got a lad here who is a good worker. Hie! Jim, can you stay with us a few days longer and dabble with the paint pot?"

Jim was glad to. He hadn't done anything in the painting line yet, so he promised with alacrity to appear the next morning.

His work was not hard,—but like so many of his tasks, he found that to do a neat, quick, thorough job a practiced hand was needed.

He spattered the paint, found "holidays" everywhere he had painted,—and daubed everything in eight with blotches of paint.

On the first day, however, he had painted all the window frames, and was ready to start the next day on the porch timbers.

He wiped his brush dry on a saw horse in the yard—and put it to soak in water He was about to start for his lodging house when one of the carpenters called to him.

"Say boy," Tom exclaimed, "I hear tell as how some day you'll be richer by $3,000,000. That a fact?"

"Yep," laconically.

"Some money, eh? What you going to do with it?"

"Haven't decided."

"You're pretty young to be handling all that cash." The man siddled closer, leaning against a saw horse.

"I'll be eighteen months older—IF I get the money at all. It was left to me by my uncle, and there are several strings tied to it. So I'm no too sure of ever landing it."

"Well, say, bub, if you ever do get your fingers on it, you want to think of yours truly. I've got the greatest scheme you ever heard of—to double the money in one year. Want to hear about it?"

"Not now—"

"Why not now? We can make our plans now and be ready to act the moment you get the money. It's a building speck. I know of some land we can buy at almost nothing. We'll cut streets through it and divide it into house lots. I'll start building the houses. My job will be building—yours the selling. We can't fail to double our money."

"It's no use talking about it until I have the money—"

"You shouldn't let a good thing like this go by. I never do. There's nothing going on I don't see, or nothing I let get away from me."

"No—I see you don't," grinned Jim, "even paint!"

Tom looked at him questioningly, then at his clothes and hands. He was streaked with white paint from trouser cuff to shoulder blade. Instantly he forgot all about his get-rich-quick scheme.

"Who did this fool stunt?" he cried, shaking his fist at the saw horse that was daubed with paint, "who—" He glanced around, but there was nobody to hear him.

Jim, shaking with stifled laughter, was speedily heading for home.
